To whom it may concern: Sr

I have had XM radio's, yes radio's, for a little over two years started with one unit then bought one for my wife. A little latter then up graded my unit and gave the old unit to my oldest girl and have just bought a DELPHI for my home, a total of four units

This all started, because I just got tired of listening to the same six songs played over and over again seperated by the same local news all day long.

Yes XM and the other satellite radio service is not perfect, but why start putting restriction just to keep AM and FM alive.

AM radio stations have been around 75 or more years and FM radio stations also for more than 40 years, granted not in the form as we hear them today.

These two media configurations have had enough time to polish their act, step aside and gracefully take your knocks, this is the price of sitting still!

I'll will end with this paraphrase

You can not entertain, all of the people all of the time, but you can entertain most of the people that listen to you all of the time!

Whether AM, FM, or XM Entertainment Rules
